Subject: I'm floored

Deborah,

I'm not going to lie, the past couple of months have been really tough. The COVID-19 pandemic has opened up the raw wounds of our nation's health care system — the devastating health outcomes for Black and Latinx communities, lack of affordable coverage for millions, relentless attacks on abortion access, and more.

These are wounds that Planned Parenthood has been working every day to heal. And while we are doing everything we can to be there for patients, lawmakers who've exploited this crisis for political gain are making it even harder.

Thanks to your commitment, Planned Parenthood continues our important work to protect and provide reproductive health care. We can expand telehealth services, fund legal battles, and be there for Planned Parenthood patients, no matter what.

Everything you contribute to Planned Parenthood — your stories, support, advocacy, and presence — helps us provide and protect reproductive health care. And starting today, we get the chance to witness the power of our community.

For the first time ever, the U.S. Supreme Court will stream oral arguments live. TODAY at 10:00 a.m. ET/7:00 a.m. PT, the justices will hear arguments in a landmark case for reproductive health. Listen to this unprecedented event here.

For decades, anti-abortion lawmakers have done everything they can to regulate if and how people access reproductive health care — like abortion, birth control, and other critical services. And even in the middle of a global pandemic they are trying their hardest to take away care.

But you're helping us make sure that doesn't happen. That's why today I'm going to listen to the live Supreme Court arguments in a critical case on birth control to see our community power in action — I hope you'll join me »

Thank you again for your support, Deborah. Please take good care of yourself and each other.

Sincerely,

Alexis McGill Johnson, Acting President & CEO
Planned Parenthood Federation of America
